Fishing Time.
There is a glamour to earth and air That tingles and Troubles and thrills
And every gypsying breeze that blows
Comes to me sweet with the little wild rose
And the brookside glade where the wood glows
And the laurel that hides in the hills

Against the roar of the city's streets
I close my ears—and I hear The chant of the pines in their clo-tered halls
The fall of the river that lifts and falls
And the long low note as the wood dove calls
And the whippoorwill challenging clear.

Never mistaking, never denying,
The woods heart calls to my heart In the thousand ways that are known to me—Starshine and campfire, flower and tree,
Splash of the black bass, birdsong and bee—
I will arise and depart.

STAYED IN BED MOST OF TIME

Muskogee Woman Was in Distressing Condition
But Is Soon Restored to Health

"Yes it's a fact I had to quit work on account of my ill health, but I am back on the job feeling years younger," said Phillip S. Clymer, 1218 North Hudson Ave., Oklahoma City, Okla.

"I don't believe any human being ever suffered any more from stomach trouble than I did as my life for years was just one long misery.
Everything I ate soured and bloated me up and my back and sides hurt day and night. I couldn't get any sleep unless I was propped up in bed with pillows, and then could only doze off from time to time. I couldn't take a long breath without having a crash in my chest and the least exertion would make me feel deathly.
I lost flesh until I was almost a walking skeleton and my skin was as yellow as pumpkin."

Well, sir, a thousand dollars wouldn't begin to pay for the good Tulane did me. I got new strength and energy from every dose, soon had a dandy appetite and my stomach was in first-class condition.
I gained twelve pounds in weight too, and went back to the job feeling better than ever. When people ask me what I have been doing to make such a big change for the better and I lose no time in telling them it was Tulane. I certainly am a fan believer in it."
